Digital Machinist magazine was founded in 2006, is devoted to the CNC Digital Machinist and is published four times per year.

Digital Machinist includes articles on the basics of programming G-code, various CNC hobby projects, CNC retrofits, robotics, CAD tips, CNC techniques, small manufacturing utilizing CNC, shop improvement projects, tips for aspiring hobbyists and much, much more. We also feature "The Mechatronist", a column by Weston Bye, in which Wes brings years of experience in the modeling and prototyping field.

The readers of this quarterly publication are avid, devoted and serious micro machinists, CNC machinists, small manufacturers, machine shop school instructors, entrepreneurs, R & D firms and large commercial machine shop owners and distributors. They read every inch of this publication and keep their issues for the "how-to" projects and informative editorials we feature. (This promotes tremendous advertising longevity!)

We also now publish e-versions of Digital Machinist which are exact replicas of our print versions [complete with ads] for all those subscribers preferring digital subscriptions, giving all advertisers even a greater reach to our readers.

Other marketing options: Pass along email banner advertising and website banner advertising on our BBS forum pages as well as other creative marketing opportunities.
